About RAHI Foundation

RAHI Foundation is based in New Delhi and has been working since 1996 to end incest/child sexual abuse (CSA) and address its long-term impact on adult women survivors. RAHI's pioneering work centers on education, awareness raising, advocacy, capacity building, research, communication and counselling. It has been, and continues to be, path-breaking and innovative. It not only forms the backbone of work on this issue in India but has paved the way for incest/CSA to become a 'field' in the country and inspired other organisations that have come up in this area. Though we are located in Delhi, the impact of our work is national.

Peer Education Programme (PEP): The PEP is our unique student peer intervention strategy, piloted successfully over three years. The mobilization of students for the PEP will be done with the help of interested college lecturers, student leaders and according to what suits the college best.

Students who sign up to join the PEP will be required to go through a selection process and will be required to fill up an application form. Approximately 30 students will be selected for the training.

The selected students will be put through an intensive training program. The training will give students a thorough grounding on the issue of child sexual abuse. Students will also learn the art of listening to a friend talking about her sexual abuse experiences, how to manage group discussions, make presentations and function as a team. The training is rounded off with some practical goal setting and a concrete plan of action.

Once trained our Peer Educator's (PEs) will design and lead educational and outreach activities for their peers. They organize debates, poster competitions, theatre events, workshops, book readings, movie shows, and stalls during the college fests. On a more individual level they integrate this into their everyday conversations and act as referral sources for their friends who have been sexually abused.

At the end of the project certificates will be given to students who have met their goals.

RAHI Foundation, established in 1996, is a pioneering organization focused on women survivors of Incest and Child Sexual Abuse (CSA). RAHI's work includes support and recovery through the distinctive RAHI Model of Healing; awareness and education about Incest/ CSA; training and intervention; and research and capacity building - all established within the larger issue of social change.

Application Form

Thank you for your interest in RAHI's Peer Education Programme (PEP). We request you to fill this form. The form is divided into 2 sections. Section 1 will help us understand your gifts, strengths and needs, as well as your motivation for joining this programme.

The information you provide us in Section 2 is more personal in nature. It will be kept strictly confidential. We understand we are asking you for sensitive information. The reason we are doing so is because working in the area of incest/child sexual abuse can be difficult and sometimes counter-productive for your well-being. We need this information so we can take care to provide a safe space for you if you join the PEP.
